The French Speaking club of Salt Lake held an entertaining soirce at the home of Attorney and Mrs. D. B. Richards recently. The evening was spent in the rendition of a programme of songs, resitations and compositions in French, a prize for the best of the latter being awarded to L. Aubert. The club is for the purpose of keeping in touch with the French language and French-speaking people of Salt Lake.

Reports from the Wyoming coal mines say that there is a shortage of men and cars amounting to 50 per cent, which cuts down the output just that much. Local coal dealers say that potwithstanding the beautiful warm weather, there is by no means an abundant supply of certain kinds of Wyoming coal, and unless there is some change for the better, when the comes with steady cold weather Wyo-ming coals are likely to become very Wyoming coal managers are for help. There is plenty of looking for help. There work to be had up there.

Word comes from Idaho that Senato W. A. Thomas J. Lynch returned Sunday from a several days' visit to the Alpine property at Lone Mountain, says Saturday's Tonopah Bonanza. He states that a force of eighteen men is now at work at the mine, the largest ever em-ployed, and that a large amount of shipping ore is being extracted and regularly forwarded to the smelters. It is just a few days over a year since the Alpine property came into the hands of the O'Meara-Lynch company, and in that time the net returns from the shipment of ore have amounted to considerably over $100,000. This, added to the cost of extraction, transportation and reduction, would bring the total production well up towards the $200,000 mark, making a most excellent showing for a property which a little over a year ago had shipped but little ore and year ago had supped but more of was practically unknown. It is, how-ever, but one of a number of Lone Mountain properties that will be doing the same thing the coming year. The opah-Belcher is already following it

It has been settled that the All Hal-lows will play the Ogden High school in Ogden today (Saturday). Word was received from the Junction City team accepting the terms offered by All Hallows. He put the earth-mould from him And pushed the slab aside, And sped along the highway— The gate was standing wide. The frost had reaped the garden, But crippled, blind and gray. Still watching on the doorstep Was old dog Tray.

He peered between the lattice— The cloth was spread for tea, A stranger held the baby— And rode it on his knee. His wife was fair and smiling. His children laughed at play. By all he was forgotten, But old dog Tray. The loving creature followed
That shape of vapor pale
Toward the clustered marbles
That glimmered in the vale.
The east was turning rosy.
With dreams of coming day,
When through the churchyard wicket

Miners Leaving Butte.

A Northern Pacific freight train left this city today with 188 miners abourd. The scene resembled that during the Coxey movement. From every conceivable opening a husky miner could be seen. The men boarded the cars at Sliver Bow Junction. They were orderly, but expressed their determination to make their way out of Montaon. No attempt was made by the trainmen to molest the men and the freight pulled out of the depot with the men waving their hats to the spectators. The men are bound for the British Columbia mines. (Washington Times.)

(Washington Times.)

When the president got back to Washington last June from his long western tour his special train brought back three wagonioads of presents that he had received and accepted during his travels. Some were valuable, while others were mere tokens of the good will of the western people for him.

The incident of the refusal of the president to accept a silk American flag made by a Boston girl and offered to him recently recalls the fact that the White House wagon made three trips to the Pennsylvania station here to take to the Pennsylvania station here to take to the executive mansion the presents that took up much space in the splendidly furnished train. The president's refusal to accept as an isolated case.

The city of San Francisco presented the president and he accepted a golf and silver loving cup, worth much money, and Sacramento gave him a silver and glass-claret pitcher and handsome silver cigar tase.

At Colfax, Cal., the president received

At Tacoma the president received a pair of totem poles, the combination gravestories and family trees of the Ahskan and far northwestern indians.

Just before the president started on his western trip he received several invitations engraved on solid gold, some of them very valuable. On March 19 a delegate from the Union League 220 of San Francisco visited him at the Waite House and presented an invitation to attend a rold of great value.

A few days before this the Dakota nembers of congress, accompanied by a ocal delegation, waited upon the President and presented him an invitation in solid gold to attend the Biack Hills Minning congress, which met at Deadwood in part of this month. This in-
